Mock exam 1 – worked calculations

2. The dividend allowance of £500 has already been used against the £15,000 of dividends already received. So, the additional rate taxpayer will pay tax at the rate of 39.35% on the additional dividend of £1,296 = $£1,296 \times 0.3935 = £509.98$. Hence net dividend = $£1,296 - £509.98 = £786.02$. Rounded to the nearest £ gives £786 (answer (d))

27. The shares cost £2 each when bought ($£40,000/20,000$) and are now worth £3 each ($£60,000/20,000$). So, each share sold generates a capital gain of £1. Matt has an exempt amount of capital gains equal to £6,000 therefore the maximum number of shares he can sell before the exempt amount is used up is 6,000.

29. Sale of the painting generates a capital gain = £60,000 ($£85,000 - £25,000$). The gain for Emma is thus £30,000.

Sale of the XYZ shares generates a capital loss of £8,000 ($£10,000 - £18,000$).

Therefore, net capital gain = $£30,000 - £8,000 = £22,000$

Taxable gain (after deducting exempt amount) = $£22,000 - £3,000 = £19,000$

30. Sale of the painting generates a capital gain = £60,000 ($£85,000 - £25,000$). The gain for Emma is thus £30,000.

Taxable gain = $£30,000 - £3,000 = £27,000$

As Emma is a higher-rate taxpayer, the rate of CGT paid = 24%

Therefore, Emma will pay CGT = $£27,000 \times 0.24 = £6,480$

31. If Matt sells his XYZ shares he will generate a capital gain =

£20,000 Taxable gain = $£20,000 - £3,000 = £17,000$

As Matt is a basic rate taxpayer his CGT rate is 18%.

Therefore, CGT paid = $£17,000 \times 0.18 = £3,060$

37. Of the dividend income of £6,000 the first £500 falls within the dividend allowance and so is not taxed. As the investor is a higher rate taxpayer the remaining £5,500 is taxed at 33.75%. Tax paid is therefore $£5,500 \times 0.3375 = £1,856.25$ (rounded up to £1,857)

44. An anti-avoidance rate of 17% is charged on the entire purchase price where companies buy residential properties with a value over £500,000. Therefore, tax paid = $£3,000,000 \times 0.17 = £510,000$

72. SDRT is charged at 0.5% on the value of the purchased shares. In this case, $£20,000 \times 0.005 = £100$
